- Analytical Reasoning (two sections, 35 minutes each)
- Logical Reasoning (two sections, 35 minutes each)
- Reading Comprehension (one section, 35 minutes)

The Analytical Reasoning section tests your ability to analyze and evaluate arguments. The Logical Reasoning section tests your ability to identify and evaluate the flaws in arguments. The Reading Comprehension section tests your ability to read and understand complex texts.

The LSAT is scored on a scale of 120 to 180. The average score is 150. A score of 160 or higher is considered to be a good score.

Your LSAT score is used by law schools to make admissions decisions. A higher score will increase your chances of getting into your top choice law school.

The best way to prepare for the LSAT is to take a comprehensive prep course. A good prep course will teach you the essential skills that you need to succeed on the test, and it will provide you with the practice that you need to improve your score.

In addition to taking a prep course, you should also do the following:

- Study the LSAT format. Make sure that you are familiar with the different question types and the scoring system.

- Take practice tests. Practice tests are a great way to identify your strengths and weaknesses, and they will help you to get used to the format of the test.
- Review your practice tests. After you take a practice test, take the time to review your answers and identify the areas where you need to improve.
- Get plenty of rest. The LSAT is a challenging test, so it is important to make sure that you are well-rested on test day.
